EQUITY IN ARCHITECTURE LAUNCH

AIA Georgia's Equity in Architecture is a new initiative that expands upon AIA Atlanta NetWorking Women's progress over the years. EQiA will foster a state-wide advancement of women in architecture so that all those entering or currently practicing in the field of architecture can become leaders in a profession that exemplifies the benefits of equitable practice.

In order to do so, EQiA will focus on five key objectives:

1. elevating public awareness of architecture's true value
2. providing professional development support
3. advocating for diversity and equality within the profession as well as with civic leaders and communities
4. networking amongst member and allies
5. funding research initiatives including participation in regional and national equity summits.

Our goals for 2017 are ambitious, and we won't be able to achieve them without the help of a state-wide steering committee. EQiA is seeking 10-12 members to join this committee. We welcome men and women, architects and non-architects from all parts of the state. Committee members would be obligated to 6 meetings per year (1 every other month) as well as championing an initiative of their choice. While we have a lot of ground to tackle, there is a lot of great support for this effort as well as a lot of work already accomplished from other AIA chapters. We hope everyone will consider being part of this newly expanded initiative
