

February 9 - April 21, 2012

4:00 - 6:30pm

Thursday afternoons after school

Benjamin E. Mays HS

The Atlanta Center for Creative Inquiry (ACCI) provides opportunities for students to be exposed to, participate in and be introduced to creativity, design, arts, architecture, real estate development, construction and entrepreneurship. The Studio is operated through partnerships that give students an opportunity to find out how projects are created, developed and constructed.

Nationally recognized practicing architect and artist Oscar L. Harris, FAIA, developed the program. Harris is the Founder and CEO of Turner Associates Architects and Planners, a 30-year old architectural and planning firm that lists Hartsfield-Atlanta Airport and the legendary Centennial Olympic Park as some of their trademark accomplishments.

Professors from Georgia Tech and local architects and engineers will serve as instructors and presenters during the project. The students will also tour college campuses, architectural and engineering firms and actual construction sites as part of their education. The students will culminate their ten-week session by presenting a specially designed project that incorporates all the training they have received.

Students will receive some materials, architectural books and special packages to complete the project.

For more information got to website - <http://www.cci-atl.org/>

Or to volunteer contact Bryan Houser @ 770.309.7144 or bryanhouser1@gmail.com