

CONTRACTOR SAFETY FORUM

Countdown to the June 2017 Silica Standard

OSHA's final silica rule has various implications for the construction industry. Join February's Safety Forum to learn how the rule will affect the day-to-day operations of your business.

OSHA experts will present on vital aspects of the silica rule, including the origin of the rule; standard requirements; how to identify the OSHA action level and permissible exposure limit; assessing when air sampling is required and how to conduct; medical surveillance requirements; and employers' training responsibilities.

The rule takes effect for the construction industry on June 23, 2017 – four months after the Forum. Attend this Contractor Safety Forum to properly train your safety personnel on the rule, protect your workers, and avoid penalty fees for improper compliance.

Presenters:

Brad Becker began his career in 2002 with OSHA as an Industrial Hygienist in the Calumet City Area Office. Brad has conducted inspections in both general industry and construction, focusing primarily on construction health inspections. Brad holds a Bachelors of Science degree from Millikin University and currently works in the Regional Office as a Senior Industrial Hygienist.

Bogdan Catalin began his career in 2010 with OSHA as an Industrial Hygienist in the Chicago North Area Office. Bogdan has conducted inspections in both general industry and construction, and has experience in public health research, risk analysis, hazard evaluation, development and implementation of training programs and exercises in government and academia. Bogdan holds graduate degrees in Public Health, specializing in Risk Assessment, Air Quality and Toxicology, from the University of Illinois at Chicago.
