This one-day workshop is grounded in the Five Common Principles of Interactivity. We utilize these principles to uncover how simple working with others can be. The skills learned will allow you to have better relationships with colleagues and subordinates. We will identify where you as a manager should spend the lion share of your time in:

- Development
- Establishing the team culture
- Setting good examples as a leader

This workshop is appropriate for those who manage people, Project Managers, Service Managers, Team Leaders and Office Managers.

Confirmation will be sent prior to class date.

Please check here if you require accommodations under the American with Disabilities Act
