Columbia Roofing & Sheet Metal ‘raises roof’ at retirement facility in La Conner, WA

Roofing company’s new WA office also reaches one-year anniversary

TUALATIN, OR – (Oct. 7, 2014) – Columbia Roofing & Sheet Metal (CR&SM), a leading Oregon commercial roofing company, recently completed a new roof project at the La Conner Retirement Inn, a local senior living community with assisted and independent living. The facility is located at 204 North First St. in La Conner, WA.

Columbia Roofing’s Superintendent Peter Perin noted that the new TPO roofing membrane system for flat roofs is a complete replacement project of the town’s tallest building. CR&SM President Mark Carpenter said his company works in four states supporting the long term care industry.

“Let’s face it roofing is not the most exciting event at a senior care facility, so we offer association support, charity events, and even car shows to help the end of life experience to be the best,” Carpenter noted. “We engage the management staff as well as the residents as the project unfolds for their input and for their involvement. For the residents it is something new and they seem to enjoy watching the activity.”

According to a La Conner Retirement Inn press release, construction on the roof began on August 4th. It announced: “Executive Director Amanda McDade is making efforts to improve the local La Conner community along with working to improve her senior living community.” The retirement property’s parent company is Radiant Senior Living.
