

Raymond L. Critchfield Scholarship for Safety

Raymond L. Critchfield was a dedicated safety professional who impacted the construction industry through his passion, love of people, family, and friends. One of his greatest attributes was his ability to train people to recognize hazards and create a safer workplace. The Raymond L. Critchfield Scholarship Program provides scholarships to individuals pursuing or continuing a course of study in the construction health and safety profession. This program recognizes individuals for their high level of academic achievement, contribution to the profession, and intent to pursue construction careers in the discipline of construction health & safety.

This scholarship will assist in providing trained safety professionals for the construction industry. Ensuring the success of these individuals will be essential to improving workplace safety for not only our projects, but for projects worldwide.

Please note: Applicants must be working in the construction industry in the safety or safety management field or preparing to enter the safety or safety management field. Recipients will be recognized during TEXO's Construction Safety Professional's Conference on November 1, 2019, at the Omni Hotel Park West. If awarded a scholarship, funds will be made payable to the institution you are or will be attending.

Funding for the Raymond L. Critchfield Scholarship for Safety is made possible through the generous support of the North/East Texas construction industry.
