Walsh Canada Repeats as Winners of National Safety Awards

General Contractor recognized for excellence in Organizational and Young Worker Safety Categories

Toronto, Ontario – October 19, 2018 – Walsh Canada is proud to receive for the second straight year, two awards from Canadian Occupational Safety magazine as part of its annual Canada's Safest Employers awards, an annual competition recognizing Canada's occupational health and safety leaders. Walsh Canada Vice President and Business Group Leader, Craig Lesurf, and Health and Safety Manager, Dave Irwin, were called to the stage at the annual gala held on October 18th to receive the honours, which include the Silver Award for the Building and Construction category and the Silver Award for Young Worker Safety.

The Building and Construction Silver award recognized Walsh Canada's continued excellence in managing a high performance health and safety program and culture, highlighted by Walsh's outstanding health and safety record, its leadership role in promoting health and safety across the industry through initiatives such as Safety Week, Safety Month, League of Champions, Safety Pass, and its efforts of engaging staff at all levels to raise the bar for safety staff through various forms of positive reinforcement.

The Young Worker Silver award was presented to Walsh for its heightened focus on keeping its young workers safe, highlighted by its graduated Yellow Hard Hat program that visually identifies young workers from more experienced workers until a defined set of criteria are achieved, its Young Worker Mentoring Program, and a minimum ratio of experienced to young workers on project sites so that younger workers can be more closely monitored and positively influenced by the established best practices of their peers. Walsh also supported industry-wide young worker initiatives that included MySafeWork and Courageous, while continuing its commitment to an annual bursary for George Brown College's Construction and Engineering Technologies program named the Walsh Canada Bursary for Safety and Academic Excellence.

"It's a great honour to be recognized among many other prominent construction companies across Canada," says Walsh Canada's Craig Lesurf. "To receive these two awards for the second straight year is a validation of the strong health and safety culture at the Walsh Group and the high level of engagement we have achieved with our staff in our continual pursuit to make sure that everyone goes home safe at the end of each day. These awards are also a testament to the commitment by the Walsh family and senior management to make health and safety the top priority at the Walsh Group."

Walsh Canada looks forward to continuing to develop new initiatives towards enhancing its health and safety program for 2019.
